MOUNTAIN CLIMBING. The Safety of the Many Bought by the Death of the Few.

All craft a depend upon knowledge and acquired simi-knowledge of the material to be handled, acquired skill in the handling of the material. covered, the secrets of crevasse formation to be learned. There were the varied pheremena implied in the phrase, "state of the snow," to be understood. Both foot and eye had to be trained to recognize by feel and glance what the 'state of the snow" at any time might be. Avalanches had to be investigated-avalanches of snow, ice and rock-when they might be expected to fall, where they were to be looked for, how far they would go. Climbers had to learn to distinguish afar off between snow and ice slopes. Moreover, the tools of mountameering had to be invented. Many were tried and discarded; a few were retained and improved. The form of the ax was slowly evolved and its uses learned. The way to employ the rope was a yet more difficult discovery. Even is only being arrived at. Accidents, usually fatal, were the essons wherefrom these facts were derived. The great Matterhorn accident finally demonstrated how the rope should be used and proved that large parties were a source of danger. The Lyskamm accident showed the peril of cornices. Unroped climbers met their death on many mountains. From almost every accident something was learned. The safety of the many has been bought by the death of the few. We can now plunge into the world of snow without undue peril. We know its dangers and can guard against them; we know also when we are safe and where we can freely go. Our forerunners went aloft as neolithic navigators put to sea—badly equipped and into a P.O. Box 3, GILROY, Cal. misunderstood region. We are now on the footing of the modern sailor. Snow, as such, has no more terrors for us than sea for them. Ill luck may overtake us, and we may fall, as they may be drowned, but with good equipment and experience the climber and seafarer aro about as safe as the townsman at home. -Fortnightly Review.

Bailway Headaches

Those who suffer from headache and feel the fatigue of a railway journey disagreeably should take with them two leather or silk covered cushions—one for the small of the back, another to re the neck and head. An emment doctor once stated that this was a capital antidote to the evils arising from the jolting of the rain, liable to cause slight congestion of the head in very long journeys. He furthermore advised no reading in the train to those subjected to headaches .- New York Times.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1893.

The receipts from duties on imports has fallen off nearly $19,000,000 in the last four months as compared with the same months in 1892. In October the customs receipts were nearly $2,000,000 less than the receipts for internal revenue. Never before has the internal PLAYED revenue receipts exceeded the customs. but this is a remarkable year in many respects and unusual events are occurring. When the internal revenue tax Treasurer Mulligan Exonerated by was imposed on the people Congress apologized for the act and said it was a war measure and would be abolished as soon as the war ceased and the country was on a peace footing again. This promise has not been kept. In 1888, the treasury, in the language of President Cleveland, was congested, How Will the Recent Elections Affect It. but he nor no other President recommended the abolition of the internal difficult to predict the effect the recent revenue tax It is true the tax on pills, elections will have on the Tariff bill matches and some other articles was now being formulated by the Demoabolished, but the principle was in- cratic majority of the Ways and Means dorsed and the internal revenue tax Committee Chairman Wilson declares. permitted to remain.

German Syrup"

Wis. This is the opinion of a man who keeps a drug store, sells all medicines, comes in direct contact with the patients and their families, and knows better than anyone else how remedies sell, and what true merit they have. He hears of all medicine for Coughs, Sore Throat, or Hoarseness that had done such effective work in my family as Boschee's Sore Throat, Winter a lady called Hoarseness, at my store, who was suffering from a very severe cold. She could hardly talk, and I told her about German Syrup and that a few doses would give relief; but she had no confidence in patent medicines. I told her to take a bottle, and if the results were not satisfactory I would make no charge for it. A few days after she called and paid for it, saying that she would never be without it in future as • few doses had given her relief." •

LONDON BY GASLIGHT |

SATURDAY NIGHT STREET SCENES IN THE CITY OF THE DOCKERS.

A Break In the Fearful Dreariness That Marks the Life of the Toiling Thousands of the East Side of the Great Metropolis.

Music, Songs and Dances.

The memory of a Saturday night in the City of the Dockers is like the recollection of a troubled dream, for on this last night of the week the great, hot streets are filled with the pentup life of the failures and successes, and can 500,000 houses (one cannot call them therefore judge: "I know of no homes), and all the varied phases of this hand to hand struggle for existence appear. The docker is prodigal of his few shillings on Saturday night, the maximum of his liberality being shown most often in the public house and on the catch penny street conjurer, while the minimum is apparent at the stalls of the grocer and butcher. But men, women and children are out on the streets, and, whatever else it be, Saturday night is something of a break in the fearful dreariness that marks the life of the east

London toiling thousands. The people love music. Their interpretation of music is rather rough and loud. The bass drum of every band that parades in a labor demonstration of a Sunday gets terribly punished before the day is over, but it commands a great following, and on Saturday night the street musicians and singers easily gather their crowds and reap an abundant harvest. The barrel organ is found everywhere, and wherever it is rattling out the popular "Daisy" or "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo" the sidewalks will be crowded, while two or three couples of little girls dance on the flagstones. Nearly every girl of 8 can dance, many of them have already appeared in public at the cheap concert halls, and as one watches them, hatless, dirty, but with faces beaming with delight, he does not know whether to be glad of their joy or to pity their hollow present and hopeless future the more. Often a part in these street dances will be taken by the older girls, factory girls, as they are all called in east London, who are out in crowds on Saturday night. They are an untheir hair about the forehead by curling it forward quite fiercely. They are in tensely loyal to the customs and traditions of their own "set," and forced as they are to subsist on an income of 6 to 8 shillings per week they are a vexin problem to the east London philanthre pist and reformer.

Besides the barrel organs, there are violins, accordions and any number of soloists unaccompanied by an instru ment. Blind women, old men and th poor wrecks of this awful struggle for existence here stand at the curbstone and in weak, thin voices sing their songs. The restless crowd moves on, save when some one more curious or more kindly than the rest stands near to look or listen. A bent woman, whose thin shawl was thrown over her shoulders, was feebly singing some old song in the UNITED STATES MINERAL DEPUTY. | midst of the jostling throng around a public house. I saw a strong young girl of 14 come kindly toward her, drop a penny in the little box held by the feeble hand and then hurry away out of sight. Happy will the strong young lass be if the swirl of the turbid stream of east London life does not bring her some time to the place of the curbstone singer. Indeed there is no place that I have ever seen where mirth and pathos, vice and virtue, meet and mingle as on these streets in a night like this.

One sees very little begging. There is not much street begging anyway—there's no use begging; the people are too poor. The mendicant flees Canning town for the wealthier residential quarters. Of course the children beset one. The sidewalk artist is sometimes found, but the most common form of appeal is from the ragged little fellows who turn handsprings or stand on their heads for you. They really do their athletics very nicely, and there is something so appealing and "old mannish" in their looks that it is hard to resist them. I was hurrying through the crowds in Victoria docks one night about 10 when a boy of 7 came out and ran beside me. relating some sort of verse, I thought. Three repetitions made it clear:

Ha'p'ny won't 'wit yer, Penny v M. G.cak yer. Tu'p': e won't send yer t' the work'us. He was evidently working on a "graduated scale of benevolence adapted to the abilities of the donor." I believe by the emphasis laid on the last item that he estimated me from my gold bowed

The barrows of east London delicacies abound in the streets where marketing goes on. The woman who sells cold pickled pigs' feet is in fair demand. The man who retails shrimps at a penny a bag gets a good trade, but the couple who preside at the barrow filled with "cookles and winkles" have their hands full. The delectable mollusks are displayed on little dishes as large as "individual butters," with a bit of garnishing of paraley, and are eaten with vinegar on the spot. These barrows are found especially at the entrance of Victoria Docks road, a great marketing place in Canning town on Saturday night. Clothing (very cheap and shoddy and called "slops"), little tools for household use, cheap laces, fil berts, "red bandanna" handkerchiefs and horn combs are some of the many articles sold from barrows in the street outside the regular shops for meat, fruit and fish. On the whole, trade is carried on with great briskness, but more quietly than in market streets at home. The butchers are the most noisy. They delight in wearing tall hate and screaming odd calls at the full of their lungs. A penny is the standard unit here in Canning town. The buyers are poor, and everything that can be called at a
